» TREE. TRUNK.

After you chop down that towering spruce, your tired arms will make you wish it could drive itself home. Not happening. But once you've wrestled said tree at least partially into the trunk, you can trim the time spent fiddling around in search of place to lash down the lid with the Trunk Cleat. The tie-down device is basically a metal license-plate frame with a handle on it. Paired with its adjustable cam strap, which has a loop on one side that lassos around the handle and a heavy-duty metal hook on the other that attaches to the bumper or towing eyebolt under your car, you won't worry about the trunk flying open on the drive home. Kurgo's Trunk Cleat costs $32. Visit motivation-design.com/kurgo/products/tc.html for dealers.
